

M COFFEE TABLE

Le Corbusier's modular man and the Golden Section define the proportions of the M-Coffee Table. This table is a study in scale; conceived as a simple rectangular mass hollowed out at key points producing architectural details. Steps are carved from one corner and a 'room' is on the other, creating a recess for books and objet d'art. An oculus has been carved into the 'ceiling' of this 'room', bringing light to its interior, like a miniature Pantheon.

The M-Coffee Table features steps for object display, a niche for books and a removable glass piece recessed on the table's surface.
